OHA 121 Breneman Collection

Date of Records: 1861-1867

Size: 1 box

Finding Aid: by Eric W. Boyle (2012)

Biographical Note: E. DeW. Breneman (sometimes spelled Brenneman, Brenemann, or Brennerman) was a Union Army assistant surgeon during and after the Civil War. Letters in the collection reveal that Breneman was asked to resign due to his impaired health in 1861. Breneman agreed but in early 1862 he was ordered to report to the Surgeon General's Office in Washington DC. He subsequently worked in hospitals in Philadelphia and New York before being appointed to a Board of Officers in 1863. Breneman continued to accompany and attend to a number of regiments before being assigned Surgeon in Charge of Division Hospitals in 1864. Breneman accompanied ambulance trains, traveled extensively to various hospitals and battlefields, and briefly was assigned to work at the White House. After the war, in 1867, Breneman was ordered to report to Missouri for assignment as medical officers were much needed out west. Breneman subsequently asked to resign because of family matters of an urgent private nature. His request was accepted by the President in March 1867.

Series/Scope and Content Note: The collection consists of correspondence and special orders between Breneman and other officials during the Civil War, donated to the Museum in 1964. Correspondence includes sixty-two letters detailing the responsibility of medical officers to receive and transport specimens to Surgeon General Brinton at the Medical Museum in Washington DC, along with letters detailing the role of enlisted men in assisting Breneman in his work in the Army Medical Museum. The collection also includes a listing of letters with brief description of subjects that serves as the basis for this finding aid.
